Stakes are high for ITRC's Ulster finale!

Callum Devine and Noel O'Sullivan

Words: Adam Hall & Pictures: D Harrigan

12 months on from 2022's tense Ulster Rally finale, the Irish Tarmac Rally Championship will yet again go down to the wire on the two-day classic.

Callum Devine, Josh Moffett, and Meirion Evans' consistent three-way rally battles this year put them all in contention for this year's highly prized Irish Tarmac title.

After four wins on the previous four rounds, from the Circuit of Ireland to the Cork 20, Callum Devine and Noel O'Sullivan are in a strong position to become Irish Tarmac Rally Champions for the very first time.

Devine needs a fourth-placed finish or higher, on Ulster Rally's points-and-a-half decider if he is to seal the championship. The Claudy driver has said before, however, he intends to go for rally wins at the end of the season, especially his home Ulster Rally. Will he change his tune with a title on the line?

Cork 20's runner-up finish keeps Meirion Evans and Jonathan Jackson in the title hunt heading to the final round. Seven stage wins and a red-flagged final test left Evans disappointed that he missed out on his second win of the season in Cork.

The Welsh pairing will have to quickly refocus on the Ulster Rally, knowing that a win will be the only way they can sneak a surprise Irish Tarmac title.

Josh Moffett and Andy Hayes are in the same boat, knowing that victory on the Ulster Rally and a finishing position of fifth or lower for Devine is the only way they can retain their ITRC crown.

While the odds are stacked in Devine's favour, a top-class Ulster Rally entry of Rally2 cars means a top-four finish is not guaranteed.

Gunning for Ulster Rally glory, Jonny Greer, Desi Henry, and Cathan McCourt are all ITRC registered and could inadvertently impact the three-way title fight between Devine, Evans, and Moffett.

Rally4: The ITRC 4 title is still up for grabs on its final round, the Ulster Rally. Shane Quinn is in a prime position to seal the title after strong finishes throughout the year backing up his Circuit of Ireland win.

Joseph Kelly and Casey Jay Coleman are his main rivals, with both less than 10 points behind after dropped scores. Wales' loan Lloyd is a real dark horse, though. Lloyd has shown immense pace over the past three rounds, winning in Killarney and the Cork 20. He'll need a win and his rivals to hit trouble, though, if he is to secure the title.

Darragh O'Donovan and Michael White

Junior: Robbie O'Hanlon and Darragh O'Donovan are set to go head-to-head in Ulster Rally's Junior decider. O'Hanlon and his co-driver Oisín Joyce hold a slender two-point advantage going into the final round of the Paul Browne Plant Hire & Civil Engineering Junior ITRC. They have led the series since a top points score on Galway Rally's opener, however, Darragh O'Donovan and Michael White have been slowly reeling them in after fuel injector woes forced them to retire on round one.

Wins in West Cork, Killarney, and most recently the Cork 20 put O'Donovan and White right back in the mix and now head to the Ulster knowing that it's going to be winner takes all final round of the season.

BRC battle heads for the Ulster Rally

Adrien Fourmaux & Alex Coria

Words: Matt Cotton

Pictures: British Rally Championship

After a year's sabbatical from the series, the Modern Tyres Ulster Rally sees the Motorsport UK British Rally Championship return to Northern Ireland for the prestigious two-day closed-road event.

Having hosted a sensational 2021 BRC finale, the bumpy and challenging lanes around Newry will also see the BRC and Irish Tarmac Rally Championship crews resume their friendly rivalry for the top spot in August.

This time around, the Ulster Rally marks the fourth round of the season and the third asphalt event of four in a row, meaning many crews will be on a charge as they gather valuable seat time on a sealed surface.

And no one will be on a mission more than World Rally Championship WRC2 ace, Adrien Fourmaux who heads to the event in his Ford Fiesta Rally2. The Frenchman launched himself into the BRC in March with victory on M-Sport's home turf in the forests of Cumbria and continued his winning ways with victory at the Jim Clark Rally and Ypres.

Garry Pearson & Daniel Barritt

Keith Cronin & Mikie Galvin

With three wins, he and Alex Coria have control of the title fight, but with their plans for the remainder of the season unconfirmed, the championship is far from a foregone conclusion.

Four-time BRC champion Keith Cronin will need a strong remainder of the season in his Volkswagen Polo R5 if he is to challenge for an elusive fifth title but will come under attack from the likes of fellow Polo pilot Garry Pearson, Skoda Fabia driver Hugh Brunton.

Kyle White & Sean Topping

The Junior BRC fight will also resume as the young hotshots aim for category glory. Lisburn's Kyle White and Sean Topping are in the pound seat in their Peugeot 208 Rally4, but cannot relax, with Kyle McBride and Casey Jay Coleman chasing him down.

Ballymena's Alan Carmichael will be looking for the National win in his i20 R5, to add to his Jim Clark maximum score.
